Introduction

In January 1862 the Confederate Post Office Department issued a system wide request for proposals to carry the mails over all of its postal routes. When the system was initially created the Department simply assumed all of the contractual obligations of the United States Post Office Department in the seceded states. Apparently the time had come to reevaluate these contracts.

Information has been extracted for the routes listed for the state of Tennessee, from an original contract proposal for the states of Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee published on January 31, 1862 (see front cover.). Proposals from prospective contractors were not due until May 17th. Therefore it should be noted that by the time the bids were opened, reviewed and accepted about a third of Tennessee had been occupied or was on the verge of occupation. Thus rendering much of what is listed moot. Nevertheless, these routes are assumed to mirror the United States Post Office route contracts in effect when the Confederate Post Office took control of the postal system in Tennessee on June 17, 1861. Thus, the information provided is still relevant.

The document provides valuable insight regarding the names of post offices that are presumed to have initially operated within the Confederate postal system. In addition there is information as to the method and frequency with which they were served by the mail contractors. Some routes originating in Tennessee cross into adjacent states and in some cases cross back. In those instances post offices in adjoining states are listed for the purpose of continuity, but not assigned county designations in the tables. Similarly, not all mail routes serving post offices within Tennessee are listed here. Routes that originated in other states before crossing into Tennessee are listed only in the contract proposals for the originating state. Thus, this publication will not reflect the total record of all post offices in Tennessee.

The data within the original contract proposals is presented in such a manner so as to make it exceedingly difficult to use (see Figure 1 for a portion of an actual page from the original publication.) For instance, there are within the state some towns that served as hubs for a number of different routes. Therefore, such towns are listed in different locations within the document. In order to make sense of the published format it was necessary to create a key to organize the information in easy to use tables. For example Route 1280 (Figure 1) in the original proposal reads as follows:

Route 1280 From Rogersville, by Yellow Store, Lyon’s Store, New Canton,
Kingsport and Eden’s Ridge to Blountsville, 43 miles and back, twice a week.

In this instance, the route originated in Rogersville and terminated in Blountsville with five stops in between. The authors have assigned to each post office on the route a two digit numerical suffix that relates to the order of the stops along the route. The identifying suffix is affixed to the route number. So in this example Rogersville is 1280.01, Yellow Store is 1280.02, Lyon’s Store is 1280.03, New Canton is 1280.04, Kingsport is 1280.05, Eden’s Ridge is 1280.06 and Blountsville is 1280.07. Rogersville was the first stop, Yellow Store the second stop, Lyon’s Store the third stop and so on.

In addition, an intuitive key was developed by the authors to identify the county for each post office located in Tennessee. The four letter designation generally consists of the first four letters of the county name. This makes it possible in most cases to determine the name of the county without having to reference the county identification table. In the above example Rogersville is located in Hawkins County for which the abbreviation “HAWK” was assigned.

The data is sorted and presented in the following formats:

- A. List of all post office names on all routes in alphabetical order
- B. List of all of routes with the sequence of stops in numerical order
- C. List of post offices arranged by county

The user is therefore able to search for specific post offices by name or by county. The cross reference to the routes can pinpoint exactly where the town was located on a given route in relation to other nearby towns. It will also indicate if the town was served by more than one route. For instance, in the example given above for Route 1280 a cross check indicates that Rogersville was the hub for five different routes, while Blountsville was served by four routes. On the other hand Lyon’s Store was only served by the one route.

It is hoped that this information will be of value to collectors, historians and other researchers who may freely use it without further permission from the authors so long as the source is cited. The original document is from the collection of Jerry Palazolo and is in the public domain. The key and format were created by Jerry Palazolo and Andrew Pinkley and are protected by copyright. Editorial assistance was provided by Francis J. Crown, Jr. Publication has been made possible through The Tennessee Postal History Society.
